Welcome to São Paulo

São Paulo, a city of skyscraper apartments, graffiti, twisty roads, delivery motorcycles speeding between cars and 21 million people. There are more people per square kilometer in São Paulo than in New York City. It is the largest city in Brazil.

Travel was long, like so many of these trips. It was a seven hour flight from Denver to Panama City, a six hour layover in Panama City followed by another seven hour flight to São Paulo. We landed in Sao Paulo around 8:00pm and made it to our hotel around 10:30pm.

Saturday night was the opening rally. All the missionaries and all the churches and all the interpreters attend to worship together. This is where we meet our pastors and interpreters for the week. There are several variables to the success of these trips: the preparation of the church, the quality of the interpreters, the experience of the coordinators and the investment of the pastor. You can tell a lot about how the week will go at the opening rally. The opening rally was well attended and energetic. It is going to be a good week.

Our team for the week.
