God is the One Who Heals

Heal the sick, raise the dead, cleanse those with leprosy, drive out demons. Freely you have received, freely give. - Mathew 10:8

Back in December Ginger and I started attending a Vineyard church in Cańyon City. Vineyard churches might be classified by some as charismatic. We define it as, “more Spirit aware.” It has challenged us to think beyond our paradigm and to expect God to move in mighty ways. One of those ways happened on this trip.

We were in the living room talking to the adult son of a woman, when another woman - Anna - came into the house with intent. Ginger, the mother, Anna and the interpreter went into the kitchen where they could talk. Anna said she was sent there for healing. Ginger talked with the woman and confirmed that she was a Christian. The woman described her ailment: severe pain in one knee. The knee was swollen and hot to the touch. Doctors had dismissed her condition. Ginger placed her hand on the woman’s knee and prayed for her healing. Ginger then asked Anna if it felt different. She replied no. Ginger prayed again. Again she said she didn’t feel anything different. Ginger then asked the woman to stand. To Anna's delight, the pain was gone. She started crying. She was swinging it around and moving it back and forth and left the house pain free and praising God.

We don't have the power to heal. We can't take any credit for what God does. We are just His tools.
