

Tuesday Update

Ginger had the opportunity to share the gospel with a husband of a woman who attends their church. He didn't want to talk to her. He hid his face. She asked him if he believed in God. He said yes. She asked him if he believed Jesus was God's son. He said yes. She asked if he believed that Jesus died for his sins. He said yes. So what is keeping you from praying to Jesus? He had promised his father that he would not become a Christian until the father had died. So what happens to you if you die first? The man wouldn't talk to Ginger anymore. Tony, another member of the team walked over to the man and prayed with him to accept Christ and they both raised their hands in celebration.

Tuesday night I went to the university outside of town and talked to a group of 15 young women. I talked about the St. Valentine and how he was willing to die for what he believed. I asked them what they were willing to die for. Then I told them about how Jesus died for them and how they could be forgiven of the things they've done wrong. Three indicated they prayed for salvation.

Susan and Anna returned to the school with the autistic boy. They prayed for him and laid hands on him he began shouting, "hallelujah."

Two days ago the boy didn't say anything intelligible.

We are seeing God at work.
